South Ayrshire litterers fined in national crack down

Scotland took a zero tolerance approach to littering on Thursday 10th June, educating people about the consequences of dropping litter and issuing fixed penalty notices across the country to those caught in the act - and 6 were in South Ayrshire.

For the third year running, Keep Scotland Beautiful teamed up with 18 local authorities - including South Ayrshire - along with police forces for a single national day of action to educate and target those trashing our streets and open spaces with their disgusting habits.

During the day of action on litter 235 uniformed officers from local authorities and police forces across Scotland worked together throughout the day patrolling the streets and open spaces of Scotland, educating and where necessary issuing warnings to under 16's .

The national day of action on litter aimed to raise the profile of the low-level crime and demonstrate to the public that the enforcement agencies have a serious desire to tackle it. Despite 66% of the Scottish public being aware that a fixed penalty notice (FPN) of £50 could be issued to those caught in the act, and 7,537 Fixed Penalty Notices being handed out in 2008/09 (77 of these were in South Ayrshire), many people still do not know of anyone who has been fined. So, local councils across Scotland, in partnership with the police forces and Keep Scotland Beautiful, were out on the day, issuing FPNs to anyone they saw dropping litter.

John Summers OBE, Chief Executive of Keep Scotland Beautiful, said, "The day of action has demonstrated that Scottish local authorities and police forces are committed to tackling littering. By working in partnership across the country we have taken a stand against low level crimes, such as littering, and demonstrated that it will no longer be taken lightly.

“It is clear that littering is still a big problem if more than 310 fixed penalty notices of £50 were issued to people on a single day in Scotland, with 6 of these being in South Ayrshire, but by continuing to educate people, provide better services and issue fines we are united in our approach to make our communities safer, stronger, greener and cleaner”.

Councillor Peter Convery, Portfolio Holder for Sustainability and the Environment said, “Littering is a public nuisance and an offence and it costs a great deal of public money to clean it up. This could easily be saved if people behaved with more consideration and I was pleased to hear from our Community Safety Officers that the public supports our zero tolerance approach to littering on the streets of South Ayrshire.”

Councillor Nan McFarlane, Chair of the South Ayrshire Community Safety Partnership said, “Our Community Support Officers were delighted with the reception they received from local residents, for whom litter is a significant issue. The approach we are taking is that littering is unacceptable in any form and will be met with a zero tolerance approach from our officers.

“Although the Keep Scotland Beautiful litter day of action is just one day, Community Support Officers are on regular patrol in South Ayrshire and penalty notices will be issued to those people who consider it acceptable to drop litter in our streets and in public places.”

- The first Litter Day of Action took place in 2008. A total of 155 uniformed officers patrolled Scotland and 178 fixed penalty notices were issued, along with a number of warnings.
- The second Litter Day of Action in 2009 was supported by 24 local authorities, 4 police forces, the Association of Chief Police Officers in Scotland (ACPOS), Royal Environmental Health Institute of Scotland (REHIS), Chartered Institution of Wastes Management (CIWM), Arney and Loch Lomond and Trossachs National Park. 252 uniformed officers issued a total of 198 fixed penalty notices, along with a number of warnings.
- This third Litter Day of Action was supported by 18 local authorities, and police forces. 235 uniformed officers issued a total of 313 fixed penalty notices, along with a number of warnings.
- Scottish Local Authorities have a statutory duty to 'keep relevant land clear of litter and refuse as far as is practicable' under the Environmental Protection Act (EPA) 1990. (Section 89(1)). Further details on the EPA can be found at www.littercode.org
- Authorised local authority officers or a police constable can issue fixed penalty notices for littering. The EPA allows people suspected of having committed an offence under the Act to be issued with a fixed penalty notice as an alternative to criminal prosecution
- In a survey carried out in June 2009, 26 of the 27 local authorities who responded had adopted the fixed penalty scheme for littering with 20 of these authorities issuing a total of 7,537 fixed penalty notices during 08/09. 4,563 of these notices were paid within the 14 days allowed, and of those not paid, 1,275 resulted in enforcement through the Sheriff Court.
- KSB estimates it costs local authorities around £100 million a year to clear litter from public land.
